Mr James P. Riley

September 11, 2018

As CDM Smith's North American Transportation Director, Jim Riley is responsible for growth strategies to advance infrastructure by leading technology change, shape strategic solutions, and create integrated mobility. He has nearly 30 years of experience leading U.S. transportation sales and delivery for consulting firms, driving almost US$1B in transportation infrastructure sales. He also has held public owner and financial advisory leadership positions, including serving as the Ohio DOT Deputy Director of Innovative Delivery, where he built the agency's Public-Private Partnership program.

Mr. Riley is a licensed professional engineer with a background in traffic engineering and transportation planning. Throughout his career, his project work has involved design, construction, operation, management, and procurement of traffic management systems, highways, bridges, and transit systems.

He is the author of a book, "Woo Who, A Simple Guide to Living" and founder of a non-profit public charity supporting women suffering from breast cancer and their families.
